Every. Body. Dances. Fresh possibilities emerge when people of different ages, abilities, and life experiences dance together. The expressive range of the art form expands and every dancer discovers new capacities. From concept to performance, this institute engages dance artists, movers, and anyone interested in the possibilities of movement as creators, collaborators, translators and performers. From dance professional to newcomer, this institute will offer challenges geared to each participant's capacity and experience level.

Join the full company of the Dance Exchange for an immersive two-week experience as we focus collaboration, adaptation of movement to one's own range and capacity, and exploration of the choreographic and generative methodology of Dance Exchange.

Participants have an immersive experience, with full days of diverse activity that engage both body and mind, while tapping into multiple modes of learning. Activities will include daily technique classes designed with high and low intensity options in mind, sessions focused on movement invention and choreographic crafting, and practice in leadership and followership. Evening activities will include video showings of archival Dance Exchange works, Critical Response Process training, master sessions with Liz Lerman, "Moving Dialogue" panel discussions, and more. This institute is a comprehensive experience of the tools, techniques and philosophy of the Liz Lerman Dance Exchange.

In collaboration with the National Building Museum, the institute will culminate in multiple site-specific performances in a downtown Washington, DC parking garage.
